BRIGHT STUDENTS.

Some Who Cannot See or Hear.

WHO HAVE BEEN EDUCATED AT THE STATE

Asylum for the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind Hold Their Graduating Exercises.

Without Voices.

The Biblical prophesy that the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped, the tongues of the dumb shall speak and the eyes of the blind shall see was all but literally fulfilled yesterday during the closing exercises of the State Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind at Berkeley. The Principal, Warren Wilkinson, told the large audience that he proposed to show exactly how the school work was done. The Rev. J. K. McLean offered an eloquent invocation which was repeated in sign language to the deaf students. Then a class of forty blind children rendered the "Huntsman's Song."

Principal Wilkinson illustrated with deaf pupils of the first year the results which could be accomplished in ten months. Reading by the point and raised letter systems, mental arithmetic and writing were all shown with excellent results. A class of deaf pupils then read essays on current questions. One of the choicest selections on the program was Thomas Morrison's rendition of "A Communion" in G upon the great organ. In contrast was the brilliant "March Militaire" rendered by Miss Lilly Smith.

A trio of little blind folks, Masters Caceres and Paxton and Miss Erickson gave a piano rendition of Mayer's "Pas Redouble," that was charming, and Gussie Most, a young blind student, sang with much effect Arditi's "Magnetic Waltz."

Lipspreading for deaf students was illustrated, and two remarkable cases were presented of the gradual return of lost speech to children who had become dumb in early childhood.

David Starr Jordan, President of Stanford University, addressed the graduating class, his speech being interpreted in the sing language by Principal Wilkinson. Professor Jordan paid a high tribute to the work of the institution. Diplomas were then presented to the following graduates: William Alodious Cotter, Caroline Jessie Grawford, Isadore Hyman Davis, Mabel Amelia Gande, Isabella Hennessy, Gustav Otto Isert. For honorable dismissal, George Richville.

"The Brook" was sung in chorus, and Miss Isabella Hennessy closed the exercises by reciting "The Lord's Prayer" in signs.

A detachment from Ballington Booth's San Francisco post of the American Volunteer Army held a well attended meeting last night in Asbury Church. It was announced Commander Booth had appointed an agent to organize a post of the army in Oakland. Several ex members of the Salvation Army related their experiences in that organization and said the Lord had called them to join the Volunteers.

Mr. and Mrs. Talmadge of Council Bluffs, I wa are visiting with Jas. Paine. Mr. Talmadge is a organ builder who became acquainted with Mr. Paine in the East. They may conclude to stay n Berkeley if they are pleased with the city, as they are seeking a permanent location.

The chicken dinner given yesterday by the ladies of the West Berkeley Presbyterian Church, and the entertainment that followed in the evening was an unqualified success, and a neat little sum was netted for the Church.

Forty new subscribers have been added to the GAZETTE subseription list within the past two days. This shows that the GAZETTE is popular, and that it is eagerly sought after.

Deputy Marshal Fred Rawson arrested a boy at the beach yesterday for bathing without a proper bathing suit.

NARROW ESCAPE.

S. Morengo Narrowly Escapes Death Last Evening.

Narrow Escape From Death.

Last evening shortly before 8 o'clock Mr. S. Morengo, was exercising a spirited colt, belonging to Mr. Lombardi, on University avenue when the animal took fright and dashed down the avenue. Mr. Morengo held fast to the lines, and tried to turn the frightened animal into Fourth street, but he failed, he then determined to keep him in the middle of the road and drive him into the bay if he could not stop him before reaching the bay.

The animal dashed madly down the avenue and the people on the street expected every minute to see the driver dashed to the ground and killed, but he retained his presence of mind and held firmly onto the lines. Just as he reached Third street the overland train dashed across the street, and a cry of horror went up from those who had witnessed the mad race. Mr. Morengo in the face of danger did not loose his presence of mind but turned his horse into Third street along the double line of tracks next to those the train was passing on and was thrown out of the cart. He still held on to the lines and was dragged for some distance over the ties and rails, but he succeeded in stopping the horse.

He was at once assisted to Rutledge's drug store, and Dr. Eastman was summoned. Upon the arrival of the doctor, an examination was made of the injured man and it was found that he miraculously escaped without any injuries except a severe scalp wound and several bruises.

Dr. Eastman took four stitches in the scalp wound and in a few days Mr. Morengo will be as well as ever. The cart was not damaged at all and the horse received only a few slight cuts on one of his hind legs.

A couple of days ago, G. Meloski, who resides on Grayson street in the neighborhood of the Stockyards became engaged in a quarrel over some chickens and ducks with some of his neighbors. Angry words and language that is seldom if ever used in church, were indulged in for some time.

This did not settle the quarrel, however, and Moloski seized a club and commenced to baste one of the women over the head with it, and soon had her placed hors de combat, and there the quarrel ended, so far as clubs and harsh language was concerned.

The woman, however, managed to get to Justice Lord's Conrt and swear out a warrant for Moloski's arrest, and he was taken into custody and on Friday next Justice Lord will listen to the whole story of the quarrel.

SPIRIT DOCTORS.

Failed to Set a Broken Bone for a Patient.

SHE HAD FAITH FOR FIVE LONG DAYS.

And Then Sought the Assistance of a Pysician in the Flesh She Will be a Cripple.

Spirits Did Not Heal

Mrs. Nancy A. Ackerman, a leading spiritualist at Fruitvale and well-known as an "inspiration poet," has followed the instruction of faith-healers, and now she is at a public hospital and will be a cripple for life. For five days, she placed her faith in the spirits, expecting them to mend a broken limb, but they did not give her relief. She would, probably, have died waiting for the spirits to act had it not been for the intervention of friends, who insisted that she should be taken to a hospital At first, Mrs. Ackerman rebelled, but was told she would die without medical aid.

The old lady lives near the famous Peterhof castle, and the district abounds with people who belong to mysterious societies. Mrs. Ackerman was looked upon as a wonder by many of these people and she told of her close communion with the spirits. Five days ago she fell down and broke her leg. The poor old woman dragged herself into the house and at once opened negotiations with the spirits to mend the fracture. She selected the spirit of her departed daughter to do the work.

Mrs. Ackerman says that she consulted with her daughter's wraith and was advised how to treat the wound. She followed this advice for five days. During this time the sufferer was in agony. The pain was intense, but still she would not have a physician. She told her friends she would rather be given a dose of cold poison than have a physician set the fracture. The faith healers said she was right and gloried in her courage.

When the fracture was dressed at the hospital it was found that the broken limb was five inches shorter than it ought to be. Mrs. Ackerman is now holding heavy weights on her legs and is suffering intense pain. She will probably never be able to walk again without the aid of crutches.

"I have no regrets for my communion with the spirits," she said today. "The spirit of my daughter came to me and told me to have faith and advised me what to do. She told me to put on bandages and make hot applications, and I carried out the suggestions. I believe I would have gotten well had not the doctors interferred."

MARRY OR MOVE.

Six Graduates Must Either Marry Or Move Away.

They Marry or Move.

The commencement exercises of the Social Syndicate were held last night at the Centennial Presbyterian Church in East Oakland. Six young ladies passed from the Senior Class of the Syndicate, whose motto is "Marry or Move." No member can retire from membership until she either marries or leaves the community. The first class to graduate is as follows: Miss Louise Childs, Miss Anna Parks, Miss Angie Watson, Miss Mabel Ransome, Miss Caroline L. Woods, Miss Thankful Arbuckle and Miss Daisy M. Plonteaux.

Graduating Exercises.

Shattuck Hall was crowded to the doors last evening by friends of the graduates, to listen to the exercises of those who have finished their education, so far as the Berkeley Public schools are concerned.

There was a good deal of dissatisfaction expressed among some citizens and taxpayers because they could not secure admission. They hold that as long as the Board of Education was paying $100 out of the school funds for the carrying out of the exercises, the tickets of admission should not have been given to only the friends of the graduating class and the teachers. The newspapers also we might say were ignored, so far as tickets of admission were concerned, at least such was the case with the GAZETTE.

The hall was very tastefully decorated with flowers, and the class colors, and presented a very attractive appearance.

The exercises were opened with an overture by the High School Orchestra which was exceedingly well rendered.

J. L. Kennedy, the class President, then delivered an address that showed careful study and a thorough knowledge of his subject.

Ray W. Simonds made an address upon Class History, which was amusing and well prepared.

The orchestra then gave another selection which was liberally applauded

The Class Prophesy was delivered by Jenny Ellison, and was a gem.

The orchestra then gave the "Robin Hood Waltz."

Members of the class then appeared in a comedy in two acts entitled "Two Strings to her Bow." The leading characters were well sustained as follows: Mons. Dumesnil, a Bourgeose father, A. T. Hughes; Mme. Dumesnil, his wife, May M. Howell; Cecile, his daughter, Stella M. West; Mons. Coudray, a friend of the family, R. S. Hazeltine; Alphonse De Luceval, suitor of Cecile, Mark H. White; Baptsste, an old servant, Carlton H. Parker. These characters were augmented by a bevy of handsome country girls as follows: Agnes P. Steedman, Daisy M. Clark, Lulu E. Frame, Fannie E. Tyrell, Grace A. Tyrrell, Viva M. Gage, Alice Stewart, Ella Roberts, Jennie Ellison, Lucy W. Dewing and Charlotte A. Henley.

A VERY SAD CASE

A Young Woman Found in a Vacant Lot

AT MIDNIGHT MONDAY BY SOME YOUNG MEN

Suffering from the Pains of Maternity, and was Sent to the Receiving Hospital.

A Sad Case.

On Monday evening last, Dr. Rowell was called from his bed a little before midnight to attend a patient at West Berkeley. He quickly dressed and was soon in his buggy and was driving out San Pablo avenue.

When he was approaching Delaware street, he noticed several young men in a vacant lot surrounding some object on the ground. As he passed, one of the men hailed him and asked him whether he knew where any doctor lived nearby. Dr. Rowell asked what was the matter, as he was a doctor and was, even then, on his way to visit a patient.

The man told him that there was a woman in the lot who was sick and suffering. The doctor immediately got out of his buggy, and went to where the lady was lying. After a few questions, he found that the woman, who was quite young, was suffering from the pains of maternity and that not more than a couple of hours would elapse before she would become a mother.

He immediately addressed one of the young men who was present and who had a horse and buggy and told him to take the woman to Oakland at once, giving him directions where to go, where the woman would be admitted and receive proper care.

The young men present were strangers to Dr. Rowell and no amount of questioning from them or the woman could elicit who she was or where she came from. The young man took the doctor's advice and the girl was assisted into the buggy and was driven off rapidly in the direction of Oakland.

The doctor says that it is his idea that the girl, for she was quite young, was being driven to Oakland from Contra Costa County, and that the pains came on to such an extent that the young man who was driving her had her get out of the buggy at the place where she was found.

The New Bath-House

Work has commenced on the new bath-house at the foot of Page street this morning. The building will be 30x30, and for the present will contain an office for the sale of bathing suits and other business, eight dressing-rooms for gentlemen and two dressing-rooms for ladies. The doors to the dressing-rooms will open from a porch on the outside which will run entirely around the building.

The building is being so constructed that new dressing rooms can be added as the business increases. It is expected that the building will be finished and the bathing suits will be ready so [illegible] on Saturday [illegible]

The place selected is one of the best on the West Berkeley beach and we have but little doubt but what it will soon become very popular among our people. It is the intention and desire of the owners of this enterprise to constantly increase the capacity of the bath house, and to add hot and cold tubs just as quick as the business demands it.

Spoons Free to All.

I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A, St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant plated hook spoon to any one who sending her ten 2 cent stamps. I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends, and made $13 in two hours, taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity. It cannot slip into the dish or cooking vessel, being held in the place by a hook on the back. The spoon is something housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were first invented. Any one can get a sample spoon by sending ten 2 cent stamps to Miss Fritz. This is a splendid way to make money around home. Very truly,

THE DOINGS OF A YEAR

On the 16th day of May, the fiscal year ended and, it being the first year that the town was conducted under the new Charter, and under the new Board of Trustees, it will not be amiss to publish a few extracts from the annual report of President Richards. He says:

Berkeley occupies an area as large as the entire city of Oakland, excepting that portion covered by Lake Merritt. Our population is grouped into several communities, or more properly speaking, towns, whose interests are diversified and often at utter variance. These communities or towns form one municipality, the officers of which are expected to so administer their trust as to provide electric lights, good streets and sewers, ample water supply and free protection to all parts of these localities. Having in mind then the difficulties incident to supplying a town so scattered as Berkeley, with these public necessities and conveniences, let us take a hasty glance at what has been done in the several departments during the past year.

During the past year our system of street lighting has been reorganized. At the beginning of the year the first, second and third wards had forty-five electric lights, while the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh wards were poorly lighted, having but twenty lights all told.

The Electric Lighting Company, under the terms of their contract, and at their own expense, have installed twenty-two additional lights where most needed, so that now, the whole town is fairly well lighted.

The subject of a complete and adequate water supply for all parts of Berkeley is the most perplexing matter with which we have to deal. Two Companies are now furnishing water to the town. The Alameda Water Company supplies the territory north of Ward street, and the Contra Costa Water Company supplies that portion of the town south of Ward street. It has been manifest for some time that unless the Alameda Water Company could succeed in developing more water it could not hope to fully supply for any length of time, the rapidly growing portions of East and West Berkeley. The Board has made strenuous efforts to have these two companies come together and have an amicable understanding whereby the territory could be so divided between them that West Berkeley, especially, could be assured of an abundant water supply. The Contra Costa Company expressed its willingness to lay a large main the entire length of San Pablo avenue, whenever the Alameda Water Company would consent to yield its claims on that portion of the town.

At the time the water ordinance was passed both companies seemed about ready to enter into such an arrangement. Since that time however, complications have arisen in details and there appears to be no immediate prospect of a favorable settlement. In justice to the Water Companies it is proper to state that each company agrees to lay pipes on any street, and of any size, provided they can be assured of a reasonable rate of interest on its investment.

It must be understood that the Board of Trustees has no power to compel the water companies to lay pipe of any given size, or even to lay any pipe at all. We have twenty standard fire hydrants in all Berkeley. We will have power after July 1st to order new hydrants to be placed at the expense of the Water Company on streets that have four-inch mains or larger. A hydrant attached to a main smaller than four inches is practically of no service.

The work accomplished by the Street Department during the last year has been of such magnitude as to require more than a passing notice. As stated before, Berkeley has a population of eleven thousand and occupies an area equal to that of other cities having a population many times greater than ours. We now have 27 miles of macadamized streets and sixty miles of sewers. Each successive year shows a rapid increase in the mileage of macadamized streets and sewers. It has been a source of gratification to our citizens to observe the cleanly condition of our macadamized streets during the past year. To keep these streets in good condition and the sewers free from obstruction during the rainy seasons is a work of no small proportions.

During the year the work of grading and macadamizing done by public contract amounted to $59,501.95 as against $11,248.11 during the previous year. In other words the Superintendent of Streets had under his supervision during the past year more than five times the amount of new street work done during the previous year. In addition to the work done by public contract other street work was done by private contract amounting to $36,912. This private work must also be done under the supervision of the Superintendent of the Streets and in a manner satisfactory to him. There has been other street work done such as cement and wooden sidewalks, which will swell the total cost of street work for the year to over $100,000.

The report of the Marshal is quite complete, but it is proper that attention should be called to one point omitted. At one time during the past year, we suffered from an epidemic of burglary. The Marshal and his deputies did not spare themselves day or night until the burglar was caught and convicted and the greater portion of the stolen goods were restored to the owners. The Marshal expresses the gratification felt by every good citizen that there have been so few occasions to make arrests in proportion to the number of inhabitants.

Attention is also called to the suppression of the illicit sale of liquor in East Berkeley. This is a long stride in the line of good government. Too much praise cannot be given to the Marshal and his deputies. It demonstrates that laws can be enforced when the execution of them is entrusted to proper hands. Each year the sentiment against the unrestricted sale of liquor is growing stronger, and each year the lines are being drawn tighter. As stated by the Marshall, much remains to be done. It will require continued vigilence and activity to break up the illicit sale of liquor.

We are indebted to our efficient Health Officer for the enactment of a series of ordinances relating to sanitary measures, that are second to none in this State. Berkeley occupies the enviable position of having the second lowest mortality rate in the State of California. The points suggested in the report of the Health Officer are of such interest as to command the thoughtful attention of every one. From the report of the Sanitary Inspector we learn that since January 1, 1896, a period of five months, sixty new buildings have been erected in Berkeley at a cost of $150,000.

The special train which will convey the Republican delegates to the St. Louis Convention to nominate a President and Vice President to be voted for at the election to be held in November next, will pass through West Berkeley to-morrow morning at 10:45.

THE STORY OF THE FENDER.

Four feet upon the fender,
Two hearts in closest embrace,
Two loving hearts and tender,
Two lovers face to face.

Four feet upon the fender
Before an open fire;
Of joy receiver each a lender,
An aged dame and sire.

Only two feet on the fender,
Two others are at rest,
"Where the wicked cease from troubling
And the weary are at rest."

To the story of the fender,
Thus often told and retold,
Due honor let us render,
Alike to young and old.

The feet once on the fender,
Whether in early days or late,
Must in time their place surrender
When death comes with his state.
—Good Housekeeping.

A DIVORCE CASE.

There was a man called Bronckhorst—a three cornered, middle aged man in the army, gray as a badger, and, some people said, with a touch of country blood in him. That, however, cannot be proved. Mrs. Bronckhorst was not exactly young, though 15 years younger than her husband. She was a large, pale, quiet woman, with heavy eyelids, overweak eyes and hair that turned red or yellow as the lights fell on it.

Bronckhorst was not nice in any way. He had no respect for the petty public and private lies that make life a little less nasty than it is. His manner toward his wife was coarse. There are many things, including actual assault with the clinched fist, that a wife will endure, but seldom a wife can bear, as Mrs. Bronckhorst bore, with a long course of brutal, hard chaff, making light of her weaknesses, her headaches, her small fits of gayety, her dresses, her queer little attempts to make herself attractive to her husband when she knows that she is not what she has been, and, worst of all, the love that she spends on her children. That particular sort of heavy handed jest was specially dear to Bronckhorst.

I suppose that he had first slipped into it, meaning no harm, in the honeymoon, when folk find their ordinary stock of endearments run short, and so go to the other extreme to express their feelings. A similar impulse makes a man say, "Hut! you old beast," when a favorite horse nozzles his coat front. Unluckily, when the reaction of marriage sets in, the form of speech remains, and, the tenderness having died out, hurts the wife more than she cares to say. But Mrs. Bronckhorst was devoted to her Teddy, as she called him. Perhaps that was why he objected to her. Perhaps—this is only a theory to account for his infamous behavior later on—he gave away to the queer, savage feeling that sometimes takes by the throat a husband 20 years married, when he sees, across the table, the same, same face of his wedded wife and knows that, as he has sat facing it, so must he continue to sit until the day of its death or his own. Most men and all women know the spasm. It only lasts for three breaths, as a rule, must be a "throw back" to times when men and women were rather worse than they are now and is too unpleasant to be discussed.

Dinner at the Bronckhorsts' was an infliction few men cared to undergo. Bronckhorst took a pleasure in saying things that made his wife wince. When their little boy came in at dessert, Bronckhorst used to give him half a glass of wine, and, naturally enough, the poor little mite got first riotous, next miserable and was removed screaming. Bronckhorst asked if that was the way Teddy usually behaved, and whether Mrs. Bronckhorst could not spare some of her time to teach the "little beggar decency." Mrs. Bronckhorst, who loved the boy more than her own life, tried not to cry—her spirit seemed to have been broken by her marriage. Lastly Bronckhorst used to say: "There! That'll do—that'll do. For God's sake try to behave like a rational woman! Go into the drawing room." Mrs. Bronckhorst would go, trying to carry it all off with a smile, and the guest of the evening would feel angry and uncomfortable.

After three years of this cheerful life—for Mrs. Bronckhorst had no women friends to talk to—the station was startled by the news that Bronckhorst had instituted proceedings on the criminal count against a man called Biel, who certainly had been rather attentive to Mrs. Bronckhorst whenever she appeared in public. The utter want of reserve with which Bronckhorst treated his own dishonor helped us to know that the evidence against Biel would be entirely circumstantial and native. There were no letters, but Bronckhorst said openly that he would rack heaven and earth until he saw Biel superintending the manufacture of carpets in the Central jail. Mrs. Bronckhorst kept entirely to her house and let charitable folks say what they pleased.

Opinions were divided. Some two-thirds of the station jumped at once to the conclusion that Biel was guilty, but a dozen men who knew and liked him held by him. Biel was furious and surprised. He denied the whole thing and vowed that he would thrash Bronckhorst within an inch of his life. No jury, we knew, could convict a man on the criminal count on native evidence in a land where you can buy a murder charge, including the corpse, all complete, for 54 rupees, but Biel did not care to scrape through by the benefit of a doubt. He wanted the whole thing cleared, but, as he said one night, "He can prove anything with servants' evidence, and I've only my bare word." This was about a month before the case came on, and, beyond agreeing with Biel, we could do little. All that we could be sure of was that the native evidence would be bad enough to blast Biel's character for the rest of his service, for when a native begins perjury he perjures himself thoroughly. He does not boggle over details.

Some genius at the end of the table whereat the affair was being talked over said: "Look here! I don't believe lawyers are any good. Get a man to wire to Strickland and beg him to come down and pull us through."

Strickland was about 180 miles up the line. He had not long been married to Miss Youghal, but he scented in the telegram a chance of return to the old detective work that his soul lusted after, and next night he came in and heard our story. He finished his pipe and said oracularly: "We must get at the evidence. Oorya bearer, Mussulman khit and methrani ayah, I suppose, are the pillars of the charge. I am on in this piece, but I'm afraid I'm getting rusty in my talk."

He rose and went into Biel's bedroom, where his trunk had been put, and shut the door. An hour later we heard him say: "I hadn't the heart to part with my old make ups when I married. Will this do?"

There was a loathly fakir salaaming in the doorway.

"Now lend me 50 rupees," said Strickland, "and give me your words of honor that you won't tell my wife."

He got all that he asked for and left the house while the table drank his health. What he did only he himself knows. A fakir hung about Bronckhorst's compound for 12 days. Then a mehter appeared, and when Biel heard of him he said that Strickland was an angel full fledged. Whether the mehter made love to Janki, Mrs. Bronckhorst's ayah, is a question which concerns Strickland exclusively.

He came back at the end of three weeks and said quietly: "You spoke the truth, Biel. The whole business is put up from beginning to end. Jove, it almost astonishes me! That Bronckhorst beast isn't fit to live."

There were uproar and shouting, and Biel said: "How are you going to prove it? You can't say that you've been trespassing on Bronckhorst's compound in disguise!"

"No," said Strickland. "Tell your lawyer fool, whoever he is, to get up something strong about 'inherent improbabilities' and 'discrepancies of evidence.' He won't have to speak, but it will make him happy. I'm going to run this business."

Biel held his tongue, and the other men waited to see what would happen. They trusted Strickland as men trust quiet men.

When the case came on, the court was crowded. Strickland hung about in the veranda of the court till he met the Mohammedan khitmatgar. Then he murmured a fakir's blessing in his ear and asked him how his second wife did. The man spun round, and, as he looked into the eyes of Estreeken Sahib, his jaw dropped. You must remember that, before Strickland was married he was, as I have told you already, a power among natives. Strickland whispered a rather coarse vernacular proverb to the effect that he was abreast of all that was going on and went into the court armed with a trainer's gut whip.

The Mohammedan was the first witness, and Strickland beamed upon him from the back of the court. The man moistened his lips with his tongue and, in his abject fear of Estreeken Sahib, the fakir, went back on every detail of his evidence; said he was a poor man, and God was his witness that he had forgotten everything that Bronckhorst Sahib had told him to say. Between his terror of Strickland, the judge, and Bronckhorst he collapsed, weeping.

Then began the panic among the witnesses. Janki, the ayah, leering chastely behind her veil, turned gray, and the bearer left the court. He said that his mamma was dying, and that it was not wholesome for any man to lie unthriftily in the presence of Estreeken Sahib.

Biel said politely to Bronckhorst: "Your witnesses don't seem to work. Haven't you any forged letters to produce?" But Bronckhorst was swaying to and fro in his chair, and there was a dead pause after Biel had been called to order.

Bronckhorst's counsel saw the look on his client's face, and, without more ado, pitched his papers on the little green baize table and mumbled something about having been misinformed. The whole court applauded wildly, like soldiers at a theater, and the judge began to say what he thought.

* * * * *

Biel came out of the place, and Strickland dropped a trainer's gut whip in the veranda. Ten minutes later Biel was cutting Bronckhorst into ribbons behind the old court cells, quietly and without scandal. What was left of Bronckhorst was sent home in a carriage, and his wife wept over it and nursed it into a man again.

Later on, after Biel had managed to hush up the countercharge against Bronckhorst of fabricating false evidence, Mrs. Bronckhorst, with her faint, watery smile, said that there had been a mistake, but it wasn't her Teddy's fault altogether. She would wait till her Teddy came back to her. Perhaps he had grown tired of her, or she had tried his patience, and perhaps we wouldn't cut her any more, and perhaps the mothers would let their children play with "little Teddy" again. He was so lonely. Then the station invited Mrs. Bronckhorst everywhere, until Bronckhorst was fit to appear in public, when he went home and took his wife with him. According to the latest advices, her Teddy did "come back to her," and they are moderately happy, though, of course, he can never forgive her the thrashing that she was the indirect means of getting for him.

* * * * *

What Biel wants to know is, "Why didn't I press home the charge against the Bronckhorst brute and have him run in?"

What Mrs. Strickland wants to know is: "How did my husband bring such a lovely, lovely Waler from your station? I know all his money affairs, and I'm certain he didn't buy it."

What I want to know is, "How do women like Mrs. Bronckhorst come to marry men like Bronckhorst?"

And my conundrum is the most unanswerable of the three.—Rudyard Kipling.

The Olympic Amphitheater.

The diggings at Olympia have revealed an amphitheater 234 yards in length by 35 in width, oblong in shape, with sloping banks. This inclosed a stadium or foot race course of 200 yards in length of circuit, and within its oval were held other games, but not the horse and chariot races. There are no signs of seats, and the spectators must have viewed the games from the grassy terraces above, where there was room for a multitude of 50,000. The hippodrome, of which only faint traces have been found, was laid out only a little way from this stadium. Here was heard the stirring music of that rhythmical hoof beat so well reproduced alike in sound and sense in the beautiful Virgilian line which so many boys have at their tongue's end:

Quadrupedante putrem sonitu quatit ungula campum.

Which is thus imitated in English: "And the base hoof of the quadruped shaketh the smoldering earth in its flight."—G. T. Ferris in St. Nicholas.

Boys and Firearms.

An accident which shows the danger of not teaching boys how to use firearms is reported in The American Field. Seventeen-year-old James Groat of Omaha, with three comrades, was hunting ducks on the river. Not finding the birds plentiful, boy fashion, they thought they would play about in the willow blind. They laid their guns down and began to skylark. All of a sudden a flock of ducks was seen coming, and there was a rush to get the guns.

If young Groat had been brought up right, he would not have left his gun cocked and loaded, he would not have grasped it by the muzzle and pulled it toward himself, the trigger would not have caught in a twig, and the lad would not have been killed. The top of his head was blown to pieces by the whole charge of shot entering just above the nose.

When a boy wants a gun and is in a place about which game is to be found, and there are hunters to hunt it, the boy is going to have it by hook or crook. So the best way to do when a lad shows the symptoms is to put him into the hands of a good hunter and have him taught what to do and what not to do, especially what not to do, and if a good gun built by a trustworthy manufacturer is given to the would be hunter, there is no danger whatever. If this was done in every instance with boys, there would be no accidental killings. It is the self confident, self taught man who kills others and himself.

Me and Others.

An artist should consider facts about the masters of his profession calmly and thoughtfully. He may reach valuable conclusions about himself. A certain musical composer of much talent and popularity—we will call him Smithkins—has a happy appreciation of his own work, as his friends all know.

So highly does he estimate Smithkin's compositions that some of his friends were much startled the other day when he said gravely, "Did you ever notice that the names of all the great composers begin with M?"

"M!" ejaculated his astonished audience.

"Yes, M," said the composer, "Mozart, Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer, Moszkowski—and Me!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Husbands to Burn.

The English actors who come over here are intensely English when they first arrive, but they soon show their appreciation of American colloquialisms by appropriating them. A gentleman of this city relates that some time ago in the New York club he met Fred Wright, Jr., the comedian. Some one was telling about a woman who had just married her third husband.

"By the way," the gentleman asked, "where is her first husband buried?"

"He was cremated," was the answer.

"And the second?"

"Also cremated."

"By Jove," observed little Mr. Wright, "that woman has husbands to burn."—St. Louis Republic.

Spoons Free to All.

I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A, St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant plated hook spoon to any one who sending her ten 2 cent stamps. I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends, and made $13 in two hours, taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity. It cannot slip into the dish or cooking vessel, being held in the place by a hook on the back. The spoon is something housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were first invented. Any one can get a sample spoon by sending ten 2 cent stamps to Miss Fritz. This is a splendid way to make money around home. Very truly, [illegible]

No Home.

A Great Chance To Make Money.

I want to tell you of my wonderful success. Being a poor girl and needing money badly, I tried the Dish Washer business and have cleared $200 every month. It is more money than I ever had before and I can't help telling you about, for I believe any person can do as well as I can if they only try. Dish Washers sell on sight; every lady wants one. The Mound City Dish Washer Co., St. Louis, Mo., will give you all necessary instructions, so you can begin work at once. The Dish Washer does splendid work; you can wash and dry dishes in two or three minutes without putting your hands in the water at all. Try this business and let us know how you succeed. EFFECT OF TEA CIGARETTES.

They Give One a Sensation of Thickening in the Head.

One of the most injurious and dangerous of new fashions is the tea cigarette. That this is no empty, baseless story of a new craze is shown by the application made last week to the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington for permission to manufacture tea cigarettes in Michigan. The applicant was told that to engage in such manufacture he must comply with the law governing the manufacturing of tobacco cigarettes, tea being a substitute for tobacco; that he must register, give bond and so on, and that the cigarettes when made must be packed, stamped, branded and labeled, exactly as the tobacco cigarettes, before the government would sanction their removal from the factory for sale.

Several descriptions of the tea cigarette have been printed, but these have erred in the presumption that the tea was taken, as sold, rolled up in a paper and smoked. This would be practically impossible, as the sharp edges of the tea would cut the paper in all directions, spoil the draft and render the cigarettes unsmokable.

To make the tea cigarette one takes a grade of green tea which has but little dust, being composed of unbroken leaf, and dampens it carefully, just enough to permit the leaves to be unrolled without being broken, and so as to be left pliable and capable of being stuffed in the paper cylinder, while the dampness is not sufficient to stain the paper. The cigarettes are laid aside for a few days and are then ready to be smoked.

The feeling of a tea cigarette in the mouth is peculiar. The taste is not so disagreeable as might be supposed, but the effect on the tyro is a sense of thickening in the head and a disposition to take hold of something or sit down. If the beginner quits them, that settles it, he will not try tea cigarettes again. If, however, the smoker sits down and tries a second cigarette, inhaling it deeply, then the thickening feeling passes and is succeeded by one of intense exhilaration. The nerves are stimulated until the smoker feels like flying, skirt dancing or doing something else entirely out of the common way. This stage lasts as long as the smoke continues, which is until the reaction of the stomach sets in.

Words cannot describe the final effects of the tea cigarette. The agony of the opium fiend is a shadow to that of the nauseated victim of the tea cigarette. It will be hours before food can be looked at, yet the first step toward a cure is a cup of tea. An hour afterward comes the craving for the tea cigarette.—Cincinnati Tribune.

PORTUGUESE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

They Have Done Nothing to Explore or Develop the Country.

In the early years of the sixteenth century, long before the first Dutch fort was erected at Cape Town, Portugal had planted her settlers at various points along the east coast, from Delagoa bay to the Zambezi and Mozambique. They did some trading in gold and ivory with the interior, and they ascended the Zambezi for several hundred miles. But the pestilential strip of flat ground which lay between the coast and the plateau dampened their desires and threw obstacles in the way of their advance. They did little to explore and nothing to civilize the interior.

Three centuries passed, during which our knowledge of south central Africa was scarcely extended, and it was not till some 60 years ago that the Dutch Boers in their slow wagons passed northeastward from Cape Colony to the spots where Bloemfontein and Pretoria now stand; not till 1854-6 that David Livingstone made his way through Bechuanaland to the Victoria falls of the Zambezi and to the Atlantic coast at Loanda; not till 1889 that the vast territories which lie between the Transvaal republic and Lake Tanganyika began to be occupied by the Mashonaland pioneers. All these farmers, explorers and mining prospectors came up over the high plateau from the extreme southernmost end of Africa, checked from time to time by the warlike native tribes, but drawn on by finding everywhere a country in which Europeans could live and thrive, while the Portuguese, having long since lost the impulse of discovery and conquest, did no more than maintain their hold upon the coast, and allowed even the few forts they had established along the course of the Zambezi to crumble away.—Professor James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

Mrs. Surratt's Arrest.

On the night of Monday, April 17, Mrs. Surratt was arrested. While the officers were searching her house Payne appeared at the door. He was admitted by one of the searching party, and, being questioned as to his identity, stated that he had been engaged by Mrs. Surratt to dig a gutter for her in the back yard the next morning (he had a pick on his shoulder) and had come to receive further instructions as to the work. This at 11 o'clock at night! Mrs. Surratt was summoned, and, when asked if she knew the man, said vehemently, raising her hands to heaven, "Before God I do not know this man and did not engage him to dig a gutter for me!" Payne had spent the night at Mrs. Surratt's on one or two occasions, had visited the house frequently, and she knew him well. At the moment of this statement by Mrs. Surratt Payne stood in the full light of the gas jet.—"Four Lincoln Conspiracies," by Victor Louis Mason, in Century.

Singular Compliment.

An author some time ago received a singular compliment. A burglar broke into his house and found the manuscript of a novel, which he took, leaving the following note: "Sir—I began to read your novel, and I was so deeply interested in it that I was obliged to carry it away, but it will be faithfully returned when finished." The manuscript was duly sent back, with a really clever critique on it.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Affection.

Talk not of wasted affection! Affection never was wasted. If it enrich not the heart of another, its waters, returning back to their springs like the rain, shall fill them full of refreshing; that which the fountain sends forth returns again to the fountain.—Longfellow.

Humor in Chicago.

If the name of the man who first thought of sending floral tributes to Chicago aldermen could be discovered, he would take first place on the roll of fame as the great American humorist.—Chicago Record.

A LESSON IN GERMAN.

The Teuton's Civilizing Influence as Seen Through English Spectacles.

At the very moment that the press of the fatherland was hurling imprecations against Great Britain in the name of humanity and civilization and holding us up to universal infamy as a nation of "brutal shopkeepers devoid of culture and noble ideals," at that very moment one of the Kulturtrager sent out to civilize Africa was being tried in Potsdam for bringing the German name into disrepute there. Wehlan—this is the administrator's name—who is only one of many, had been sent out as vice chancellor of Cameroon, had occasionally represented the governor, and during the Bakoko rising had acted as chief of the police force. His administration was systematized cruelty of a kind which a few instances will illustrate. Augustus Bell, "a nigger," was accused of having stolen a watch. He denied the charge, and Vice Chancellor Wehlan sentenced him to receive 60 strokes of a hippopotamus hide whip to compel him to confess. When this sentence was executed, the man's body was a jelly. Dr. Valentin said that "a raw hacked beefsteak was nothing in comparison." A cook who innocently gave a few nights to a man charged with larceny received 20 lashes of the same instrument of torture.

The government interpreter, Etecki, stole some money and spirits, and to punish him the German vice chancellor and assessor Wehlan kicked him so long and so cruelly that the engineer of the German steamer Nachtigall had to turn away unable any longer to look upon the sight. Then Wehlan ordered 15 lashes to be administered to the wounded man, and finally gave instructions to have a rope tied round his waist so that he could be plunged into the water. One of three prisoners whom he had in custody was helped by a cook to escape. Wehlan ordered the cook to be seized and killed with the two prisoners—beaten to death, "no weapons to be used." They were kicked and thumped until half dead, when their necks were struck and their heads battered in. The corpses were horribly disfigured. During the Bakoko insurrection villages were burned to the ground and the throats of helpless old women cut. Prisoners, when taken, which was not always, were delivered up to the soldiers to be scalped alive. "A cut was made in the lower jaw with a knife, the fellow seized by the teeth, and the whole scalp drawn over the face and head." Two German gospel missionaries testified that these were the most efficacious means of improving the niggers.—Fortnightly Review.

A CUNNING COLLECTOR.

He Has Devised Means by Which He Is Able to Reach Elusive Debtors.

The regulations of the postoffice department forbid postmasters to furnish to inquirers the addresses of persons who have removed from the residences or places of business formerly occupied by them, the reason for this rule, as given in the official instructions, being as follows:

"The agents of the postoffice department are furnished with the names and addresses upon letters and other articles of mail matter for the sole purpose of enabling them to make delivery thereof to the persons addressed. Such names and addresses are to be regarded as confidential and their confidence must be respected."

Among those to whom this regulation furnishes a protection against undesirable intrusion are some who have followed the Arabian custom of silently stealing away after the folding of tents, but have omitted to settle with their grocers, butchers and milkmen. The anxious creditors, on seeking from the letter carrier or at the postoffice for aid in finding the delinquents, are confronted with this rule and retire from the search baffled. An ingenious man, however, whose business is that of a collector of such debts, has hit upon a method of smoking out these modest and retiring nomads, and has practiced it with success. His plan is to send each of them a circular bearing a heading which gives the impression that he is in the express business, and informing the recipient that he has a package for him which he is unable to deliver for lack of knowledge of his present address, to which it will be promptly dispatched on receipt of the necessary information.

This circular is directed to the former address of the man who is "wanted," and is then redirected and forwarded by the postman to that which has been confided to the postoffice. Inspired by wild hopes as to the possible value of the package, the debtor takes the wily author of the circular also into his confidence, sends him his new address and awaits the arrival of the mysterious bundle only to find—too late—that men betray. He receives a call from his creditor's representative, with demand for an immediate settlement or threat of a lawsuit. Thus does the cunning pursuer of the off-flitting debtor bring to naught the august mandate of the government.—New York Tribune.

HOW TREATIES ARE MADE.

The Initiative, In Negotiations With Foreign Powers, Is With the President.

"The treaty making power is given to the president, in connection with the senate, by the constitution," writes General Harrison in his "This Country of Ours" article in Ladies' Home Journal. "The initiative—the negotiations with foreign governments leading up to an agreement, and the framing of the articles of the treaty—is with the executive. The senate has no part in the matter until the president communicates the treaty to it and asks its concurrence. It may then, however, either concur or reject, or concur with amendments. When the executive has agreed with any foreign power upon a treaty, and it has been duly signed by the plenipotentiaries for their respective governments, it is sent to the senate for its concurrence, and is considered there in secret session. Whatever may be said as to the wisdom or necessity of secret sessions for other purposes, it is manifestly necessary that the terms of treaties and the discussion of them should, in many cases be kept in the confidence of those charged with concluding them until they are concluded.

"Though all the attempts in the constitutional convention to give the house of representatives a part in the making of treaties failed, it is still true that many important treaty stipulations depend for their execution upon the action of the house. If a treaty stipulates for the payment of money, Congress must make an appropriation from the treasury without an appropriation. It may be said that as a treaty is a part of the 'supreme law of the land,' it is the duty of congress to appropriate the money necessary to carry it into effect, and that in the making of the appropriation the house has no right to consider the question of the value or propriety of the treaty. But, all the same, if the appropriation is not made the treaty fails. Usually appropriations to carry out a treaty have been given freely by the house, but there is power to withhold them, and so to defeat the treaty. As to treaties involving our revenue laws, the house—having by the constitution the sole power to originate revenue bills—has claimed the right to act upon a consideration of the wisdom or unwisdom of the treaty."

Hades Indeed.

"We will now," said the attendant imp, "go and get your wheel. You will have nothing to do all eternity long but ride around street corners as fast as you can."

"Really," thought the scorcher, "I must have got into heaven after all."

"Your wheel," the imp further explained, "will be geared to four inches and will weigh 600 pounds."

A sound of rattling laughter was heard coming from the department in which were confined the souls of those who had died in throes of profanity the moment after being run down.—Indianapolis Journal.
